SPECIALIST

Dr. Nancy Mulligan (she/her) is an Associate Professor at Regis University where she has been able to facilitate growth in the next generation of physical therapists through her passion for orthopaedic physical therapy, global health and clinical education. She served as the Director of Clinical Education for 13 years where she gained an appreciation for the profession of physical therapy by building partnerships across the country and continues to develop mentors for the Regis University Residency of Orthopaedic Physical Therapy. She is a Fellow in the American Academy of Orthopaedic Manual Physical Therapy.

MOTIVATIONAL INTERVIEWING

Change is hard for our clients, our employees, and our students; but the only constant in healthcare is change. How can we prepare for change and use evidence-based methods to empower others to make changes? Motivational interviewing is a tool that can assist individuals (clients, employees, or students) make behavior changes to achieve a personal goal. Using motivational interviewing in the clinic can improve outcomes for your clients as you work together towards a client's goals. This technique can also be used on an organizational level when working to create change in a department or system.

During this event, you will work through examples of client, employee, and student motivational interviewing. You will leave with the tools to implement motivational interviewing in your next client session, student goal-setting meeting, or employee interaction.

Enjoy breakfast, networking, and learning through small group discussions with a group of like-minded peers.
